

Retiree Reimbursement Account (RRA)

Helping you pay for specific health expenses

What is an RRA?

An RRA is an employer-funded account that helps you pay for eligible medical expenses during retirement. Expenses include most health-related expenses and health coverage premiums.

Benefits of an RRA

- Be better prepared for retirement. Use your RRA funds to pay for eligible health care expenses during retirement. Your employer determines what's eligible.
- It's employer funded. Your employer contributions are usually credited to your account on a regular basis.
- Enjoy online support. You have 24/7 access to your account information from your PayFlex® member website. You can:
 - View your account balance and employer contributions
 - Submit claims for reimbursement
 - Enroll in direct deposit
 - Review debit card transactions (if applicable)

How to use your RRA funds

Using the funds in your RRA is easy. Your employer sets the amount contributed to your RRA. And once you're eligible to use your funds, you have three ways to spend your RRA dollars.

You can:

- Pay for an eligible expense with cash, a check or a personal credit card. Then, submit a claim for reimbursement. You can do this online, through the PayFlex Mobile® app or by filling out a paper claims form.
- Use your PayFlex Card to pay for an eligible expense (if offered).
- Pay your provider: Use the PayFlex® online feature to pay your provider directly from your account.

Things to remember

- Your RRA funds are available as soon as you retire.
- When submitting a claim for reimbursement, you can have the money deposited directly into your checking or savings account. If you don't sign up for direct deposit, we'll mail you a check.
- Qualified expenses are set by your employer according to Internal Revenue Service guidelines.
